If you could meet anyone, either past or present, who would it be and why?

Gandhi or Buddha. They influenced people in a lot of positive ways. They were pacifists and spiritual revolutionaries.

Nostradamus or Sir Isaac Newton. I'd like to meet them because of their knowledge of astrophysics. I would speculate and observe them. Isaac Newton discovered the laws of motion that lie at the heart of physics. Nostradamus was a great healer and studier of the stars

Albert Einstein. He made an important contribution to science. I think he'd be an interesting person to talk to.

I would want to meet myself. I would ask myself what I'm doing here.

Mumbo Jumbo: It's good to get mad !!

By Justine DaCosta

My best friend recently moved into my house, and we've made a habit of watching the news every night. This may seem like a socially responsible thing we're doing. We're becoming aware of what's going on in our community, filling our dehydrated brains with knowledge of current events. What do we get for being curious and conscious? We get depressed and pissed off. I have never been so appalled as I was the night before last. Kids shooting kids, parents shooting kids who shot their kids, planes crashing, boats exploding, women being raped and murdered - I should have taken an anti-depressant before turning on the television. The real problem is, these ARE real problems. I know the news is full of it half the time, but the other half is the portrayal of this pathetic society that is full of greed and jealousy and anger. We're disgusting. We are fed gameshows and pageants and twinkies, and it truly has had an effect on us. We can't blame anything but our complete lack of self control on the state we have entered. I think I was misdirected on my journey to this body, because I swear I relate more to my cat than any person I've ever met. He's honest. He cries when he's hungry, and crawl on my lap when he needs love. Life is as basic as you make it, I guess - for some people at least. It's hard to look the other way for a reason, bugh. The news sucks because we suck. As we will continue to suck until we change oways. I think we'll probably keep sucking for any long time, so I will continue talking to mat and avoiding most levels of socializing, and will keep watching the news every night. We shld be pissed off.
